WHAT WE WANT.

We want our money and must have it.

We want our punctual, advance paying subscribers to continue in the good work.

We want our delinquent subscribers, those who owe us for one, two, three or four years, to know that we want our money.

We want them to know, that we do not think it very honest in them to read our paper so long, and retain in their pockets, the money which is justly ours.

We want you to read, and study the Golden rule "Do unto others as ye would that others should do unto you."

We want you, each one of you, to ask yourself the question, "Would I work from year to year without compensation, or remuneration?'

We want you to reflect for a moment over your past delinquency, and then recall to your minds the terrible punishment inflicted upon the unfortunate man who died in debt to the printer.

We want you in brief to know that every man who owes us for more than one year, and neglects to pay up between this and the 1st of January 1873, will have his name stricken from our list, and his account left with a Justice of the Peace, for collection.

We want to adopt the cash system, and intend to do so, on the first day of January 1873.

We want to settle up all our accounts, and do not want to be compelled to publish a Black List wherein will appear the name of each delinquent subscriber.

We want all our subscribers to continue, and our friendly relations with all to remain intact; but in order to do this you must pay up, you must do your duty. We will do ours.

We want you in short, to be more punctual in your payments, to work for the REPUBLICAN, to induce your neighbors to subscribe, and pay for it, to hold up our hands to aid us financially; to aid us by your influence, and by your kind words If you will do this we promise to make the REPUBLICAN second to no county paper in the State.

HOW LOW!

In another article we publish the opinion which Meek entertained of Gov. Curtin in 1864. In the same paper dated Feb. 5th, 1864, we find the following in reference to Col. Jno. W. Forney, who had left the Democratic party some three years before that date. Our readers will please excuse us for suffering such low vulgarisms to appear in our paper. Our only apology for so doing is to let you see to what depths of political infamy some editors can fall, and how basely Meek can slander a man whom he charges with being guilty of treachery to the Democratic party. Here it is. Read it:

"We understand that quite a number of our friends, have taken the advice of a Democratic Editor and called their dogs "Forney." Now this is wrong, decidedly wrong, and if the item containing the advice was published in the Watchman, we take it back, acknowledging that we have done wrong—not to Forney, but to the dogs. If you have a most contemptible, mean, dirty, nasty, sneaking, stinking, cowardly bitch, call it Forney, but don't disgrace a decent dog with the name."

Now, since Col. Forney favored the election of Buckalew and opposed the election of that brave soldier General Hartranft, we are prepared to hear that Meek has called a son for Forney. This would verify the truth of the adage that "curses like chickens come home to roost."

A MAN WITHOUT AN ADVERTISEMENT.—Talk about a woman without a baby, a man without a wife, a ship without a rudder. What is the lack of each of these individuals or things to that of a man without an advertisement? He is a hopeless cuss, a "goner in the community." Talk of being successful in business. You might as well talk of ascending to the moon on a greased moonbeam.—"Poor Cassius has a lean and hungry look" It may, however, be consoling to him to reflect that when he dies he will be advertised at last, and gratuitously at that.—Exchange.

MICHEAL MOORE, the wife murderer will be hudg to-day in Ebensburg.

THE Epizootic continues to delay the mails.

POLITICS MAKE STRANGE BEDFELLOW.

MEEK'S MEMORY NOT GOOD.

The Watchman of last week in referring to an article on "party Treachery" which we copied from the Harrisburg Telegraph, assumes the role of advocate for Ex-Gov. Curtin and others who proved false, in the last campaign, to the party which had exalted them to places of honor and profit.

In his defense of Gov. Curtin, Meek uses the following language: "A few months ago, before he (Curtin) had declared his sentiments in favor of Mr. BUCKALEW, our radical friends would have damned the man that had dared to say a disrespectful word of him. As soon, however, as his opinions became known, and it was found that he was opposed to HARTRANFT, GRANT & Co, the hell-hounds of slander and vituperation were let loose upon him, and a storm of abuse was raged around his head that was appalling to witness." &c. &c.

Meek thinks it terribly awful to call such a man as Governor Curtin a "traitor" to principle and to the great party that made him all the reputation he had as a man, a politician, statesman or War Governor; but Mr. Meek's memory is not good. He forgets how his party leaders twelve or fifteen years ago preached against the heinous sin of "party treachery" and how, all such men, were, at the command of the southern slave drivers and their tools—the Democratic leaders of the North, driven from the Democratic party—read out, exposed, vilified, as mean, unprincipled, degraded beings unfit for the fellowship of man. "The hell-hounds of slander and vituperation were let loose upon" them and the party lash was effectually used to either drive them to give up their manhood and personal liberty or to drive them out of the party forever. No more proscriptive tyranical, overbearing or aristocratic party ever existed, than was this self-styled Democratic party when it was in the majority and had the power to enforce its will—its mandates. Meek, forgets, when he is palavering Hon. H. N. McAllister, with heartless praise that the said Mc Allister, with Rev. Jno Tonner, Rev. M. P. Crosthewaite, Hon Geo Boal, Hon. Jno. Hasson, Geo Jack Esq., and many more, were read out of the Democratic party in this county for daring to assert their own opinions against the will of the applyers of the party lash.

But says Meek. "We have just as much contempt for those fellows who barter their political virtue as anybody; but when a thinking man, a man of high intellectual abilities, a Statesman, conscientiously makes up his mind that he can no longer act with his party, for certain reasons which he respectfully makes known, and which he believes to be just and right—we say that such a man ought to have credit for honest intentions and ought to be treated decently and deferentially. There is no party treachery about anything of that kind."

This is the doctrine Meek now preaches, and yet he would declare that the Democratic party had never changed, that it is not aristocratic, and that it believes in the intelligence and honesty of the laboring classes. Reader, mark the language of Mr. Meek!

He says that he has "just as much contempt for those fellows who barter" &c The italics are ours. How contemptuously Meek speaks of the rank and file of his party—the working men, mechanics and farmers For these when they turn "traitor" to party, Meek has nothing but "contempt.

Why? Because, they, in his opinion, are not competent to think, or to form an opinion of their own.

Does he not so declare in the language used?

We do not misrepresent him.

Nor need we strain his language to make his intention, his meaning clear.

He has contempt for the fellows—the poor men—who have the audacity to leave their party; but when (he says) a thinking man, a man of high intellectual abilities, a Statesman "conscientiously makes up his mind," &c. This act of the thinking man, Meek asserts "is just and right."

Is not the inference clear that the class that Mr. Meek terms fellows, has in his opinion no right to change their party politics? In them, it is a crime, and only merits the contempt of Mr. Meek.

Why?

Because; as he alleges, or as we may honestly infer from his language, these fellows are not thinking men, are not possessed of high intellectual abilities, are not Statesman, and therefore, can only have Meeks contempt when they cut the ticket or forsake their party.

But such men as Governor Curtin, according to Meek, can forsake principle, can sacrifice old friendships, can be guilty of treachery to his party, because he is "a thinking man, a man of high intellectual ability, a Statesman"

Workingmen, farmers, mechanics, do you perceive the distinction here made? Meek is willing that Curtin should play traitor to his party, but he is unwilling to believe that the masses of the people have sufficient brains, or judgment to choose for themselves.

If they did, he knows that the Court House Ring would soon lose its power and Mr. Meek's chances to fleece the tax payers of Centre County would soon grow "small by degrees and beautifully less.

But we have said Meek has a bad memory, and we take the liberty of refreshing it a little, by copying his opinion of Hon. A. G. Curtin a few years ago. From the Watchman dated February 5, 1864 we clip the following:

I need hardly renew my pledge that during the term of office on which I am about to enter, I will give my whole moral and official power to the prosecution of this war.—Gov. Curtin's Inaugural.

"It may sound strange to some to hear a man talk of giving MORAL power to do the work of SATAN, but to those who best know the Governor, there is no inconsistency in the words. It is his moral power he is going to give, and we feel assured that if no greater power is used than this, the "rebellion" is in a very fair way of success

But it is laughable to hear any one talk of giving what they have not got, and have not had for many years; these words of Governor Curtin's may serve to tickle the ears of some; but to Bellefonte we know that his promise of moral power is like that of the Devil when he offered the Savior the whole earth, and about as likely to be fulfilled."

Now, who has changed, Meek or A. G. Curtin? Who has been guilty of party treachery Meek or Curtin? Did Meek tell the truth when he uttered the above in 1864? If so, does he tell the truth now? We leave our readers to make their own comment.

FILE YOUR PAPER.—It is well worth while to save your home paper and have it bound. A few years will make it the most instructive and entertaining volume that you can possess. All the laws of association make it more or less a history of yourself and friends. Names, dates, facts, are preserved for you in the most accessible manner. Over it you may cry at your mistakes, laugh at your follies, and rejoice in a review of those steps that have led you to prosperity. It records the history of a town, which is but an epitome of universal history.

WE HOPE Congress when it assembles will knock the contemptable humbug of "Civil service reform" into pie. It is a humbug, an outrage upon the men who saved the nation, who compose the Republican party and the men who placed Gen. Grant in the Presidential chair for a second term. "To the victors belong the spoils" is just as true, appropriate and safe, now, as it ever was. "Let us have peace" and all the offices.

EDUCATION.

That a good education is the source of all virtue, is an unquestionable fact; and in all countries removed from a state of barbarism, the education of the rising generation has ever been considered an object of primary importance; and those friendly to the best interests of their country have always devoted much attention to it, convinced that the perpetuity of their rights, civil and religious, depends upon the diffusion of knowledge, and a correct formation of the habits of youth.

To develop the intellectual energies, to watch and cultivate with care the opening germs of genius, to turn the tumultuary and conflicting passions, when uncontrolled by reason, or the force of experience, into their proper channel, is, in a great measure, the task of those engaged in raising and educating the rising generation.

Hence it is, that all those to formalize the affections of the heart, and the powers of the mind, should be morally and mentally qualified. Nature, bountiful and wise in all things, has provided us with an infinite variety of objects, both for our advantage, instruction and entertainment; and, like a kind and judicious parent, admits all her children to a participation of her blessings; but as the modes, situations, and circumstances of life, are various, so accident habit, and education, has each its predominating influence, and gives to every mind its particular bias. Where excellence is wanting, the attempts to attain it are but few; but eminence excites attention, and produces imitation To cultivate that important part of the work of creation, to invite the assiduity and perseverance, to raise the curiosity, and to awaken the listless and dormant powers of young minds, we have only to point out to them an inestimable requisition, and the means of obtaining it; but until a larger number of the community seems more highly to estimate the advantages resulting from a well cultivated mind, and manifests a greater disposition to aid and encourage the means whereby this is to be correctly obtained, we cannot expect this beneficial and highly desirable object to be effected

There are some parents indeed, who have liberal minds, and who are possessed of a truly cultivated taste, that know the ineffable advantages and delights which are derived from a careful and correct education; and are, therefore, desirous that their children should enjoy the same refinement of mind, the same intellectual resources, and a rational respect for themselves. But the sordid and illiterate cannot, by the most direct reasoning, be made to comprehend the value of these attainments, the most important object of which, is, to purify the taste, cultivate the mind, harmonize the affections, improve the understanding and hearts, and enhance the dignity of human nature.

They commonly imagine that it is the external appearance which must make their children respectable and respected, that all qualifications are subservient to frippery of dress, and that a little portion of uncertain ore supplies the place of internal resources.

Consequently they bestow so much care and attention, and lavish every expense that can be devised on their personal decoration, to render them amiable, respected, and agreeable; while they murmur largely, and form insurmountable objections, to award the meritorious exertions, pains and care, of those who labor to embellish that "pearl of greater price." It is well known that internal elegance adds beauty to external grace; and the brightest natural powers, the most highly ornamented form or exalted station in life, cannot confer happiness, nor they will not make a person agreeable, nor scarcely respectable, in polished society, if he be totally a stranger to that liberality of sentiment which a cultivated mind bestows; and further, destitute of this, he or she will have many languishing hours not known how to be disposed of, and will often feel untent and relaxed, languid and melancholy, sometimes averse to discharge the duties, and frequently disqualfied even for relishing the pleasures of ordinary life.

"Nothing," says a learned author, "Can fix esteem and pure respect, but that kind of beauty and ornament, which depends on the beauty and splendour of a virtuous and enlightened mind. The least degree of understanding will be disgusted with external attractions, if internal accomplishments are wanting, the one is always loseing while the other is continually gaining. A beautiful character is the morning light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day. Sense, spirit, and sweetness are immortal; all besides withers like grass." The power of looks to please is diminished every time they are seen, and when these lose the power to please, the soul will seek a soul, it will refuse to be satisfied with anything else. To promote the happiness and the excellence of the individual, to render him a valuable member of society, and to accustom him to aspire, by the regular discharge of all his religious and social duties, to the happiness which awaits the good in a future world, are the great ends which should be kept in view, in the education of all, whatever place in society they may be destined to occupy, from the son of the meanest cottager, to the heir apparent to the throne.

But the indefinite vanity of relations in which man stand to each other, requires a corresponding variety of acquirements, to enable them to fill their respective stations with respectability and satisfaction to themselves, and with advantage to the community to which they may belong.

Education, therefore, is either general or particular—general while it regards us as sentient, moral, and intellectual beings, susceptible of happiness, and capable of improvement; particular when it is designed to qualify us for some station or occupation in life.

In short, education, in the strictest acceptation of the word, comprehends everything which has any influence in developing the powers of the mind, and the tendencies of the heart; therefore, object is to cultivate the intellectual and moral powers, with a view to some specific result; and education is good or bad, proper, or improper, complete or deficient, as the course of discipline is more or less condusive to that end, and as the means employed are adequate or inadequate to its accomplishment

In whatever light we view education, it cannot fail to appear one of the most important subjects that can engage the attention of mankind. When we contrast the ignorance, the rudeness of the savage, with the knowledge, the refinement and the resources of civilized man, the difference between them appear so wide that they can hardly be regarded as of the same species. Yet, compare the infant of the savage with that of the most enlightened Philosopher, and you will find them in all respects the same, the same "high capacious powers" of mind "lie folded up" in both; and in both the organs of sensation are exactly similar; all that is afterwards to distinguish them, depends upon their education. While the mind of the savage, left entirely neglected, will scarcely raise him above the level of the animals around him, insensible to all the wonders of creation, and shut out from all the treasures of nature, the more fortunate member of enlightened society, whose capacities shall be evolved by a proper education, will comprehend within the ample range of his intelligence, the universe of God; all the beauties of creation will be unveiled before him; nature will unlock to him her sacred stores, and reveal her secret laws; the powers of other creatures will become subject to his control and the faculties and the attainments of men will be made subservient to his advantage and his delight. Such is the importance of education to the intellectual and consequently to the happiness of man. The untutored barbarian, like the beasts which he hunts for subsistance, or from which he dreads destruction, acts merely under the guidance of instinct, or from the impulse of appetite or passion A stranger to control, he acknowledges no law but his own will. Not disciplined to subordination, or trained to reflect on the relations of society, he submits to no authority, but the leader whom he chooses to conduct him to the gratification of his private or national animosities, and his wildest desires are indulged without the slightest regard to any future consequence, or to any feelings but his own. His enjoyments, therefore, are entirely selfish, altogether arising from the most ferocious passions, or the most groveling appetites. These natures opposite as they appear, are formed originally after the same image. It is education which raises him above the degrading dominion of passion, teaches him to respect the voice of reason, and to follow her as the guide of his conduct. It is education which elevates his thoughts habitually to his creator—gives constancy to his virtue, amidst all the trials of life; and serenity to his mind, amidst all its evils—which leads him to repose on the wisdom, the goodness, and the omnipotence of the Lord of the universe; and carries forward his views to the regions of immortality, when the apparent confusion, and intricacy, of the ways of Providence shall be unravelled into the most perfect order

The excellence simply described here, as the result of a good education, has been attained by many, few are incapable of attaining it; and it is this capability which renders education an object of such incalculable importance, and such deep responsibility, to all who have the charge of forming the human mind. Having made a few brief, and perhaps imperfect, observations on the great advantages resulting from a good education, I will yet make a few remarks upon the injudiciousness of placing youth under illiterate, and incapable preceptors; persons who are engaged to be the models of the learning, and moral conduct of our beloved offspring.

That is a duty enjoined on all, both by the laws of God, and the voice of society, to instruct them well, no one guided by reason will pretend to deny. That it is an obligation to seek good instructors, without whom this truly great blessing cannot be obtained, when they are absent from the paternal roof, is a fact to which every man must attest; and yet this concern, important as it may be, is apparently treated as a matter of little weight. It must be well known that children are the very creatures of imitation; and we all know that the impressions made, and the habits and knowledge imbibed, at the period of life of childhood, are ineffaceable; and yet parents treat this momentous affair as a matter of little moment or importance.

They frequently send their children to receive these everlasting influences of persons, of whose abilities and character they are wholly unacquainted. But would they go to a tailor, and ask him to make a coat, or to a dress-maker and ask her to make a dress, unless they had the best reason to believe that they understood their business

Do they employ any mechanic to work for them unless they think he is qualified? But still they can trust their children's minds to persons of doubtful capability, and of whom they have no knowledge—in some instances, merely because they can have them taught for a trifle less.

Strange infatuation! They stop about all these trifles, while the immortal parts of their children are in question and neglected. But is it not as difficult to teach properly as to preach sound doctrine; defend with success, an important cause; or to observe some other matters, of which I have been writing? If so, why is not as much attention to preceptors' qualifications, given as to those other concerns, as they have to plant the seeds of all knowledge, which may be sown in any soil; but it is by proper culture alone that they can be cherished and brought to maturity. However until there be a more familiar intercourse between parents and teachers, that great and desirable benefit cannot be expected to arise from the labors of the most competent. And to induce those perfectly qualified, and respectable, to engage in the profession of teaching, remuneration should be held out to the ratio of their utility, and be considered equally honorable as the divine, the lawyer, or the doctor; but by some unaccountable caprice, the opinion of many is, that those whose exertions are next to ecclesiastical of the greatest importance, must be an inferior order of beings, unworthy this attention, confidence or friendship.

But, I would say, this can only be the opinion of an illiterate and little mind, and when there is the sneer of ignorance, or the look of contempt, it is usually treated with equal derision, or careless indifference I should think this mistaken idea, arises from a consideration of their dependence; we are all equally in want of assistance and approbation of each other, and every obligation from man to man is mutual.

However, in many instances, some silly opulent persons evince such conduct as to show that they think teachers should receive all indignation, and every manner of caviling, without the least retaliation: but is there any one of an independent spirit, or of any feeling, conscious that he is doing his duty, that will receive ill treatment? If there be he is not capable to instruct. Every instructor requires as much independence as the King on his throne.

It is the independent character and steady uniform demeanor, as well as his abilities and moral conduct, that insures respect from children, and consequently a general improvement.

Destroy the authority or spirit of a teacher, and, doubtless, children will not progress in their studies. The more instructors give up their authority, and the more they suffer themselves to be ill-treated, the more will the great body of society shackle them by customs engendered by folly, and propagated by error. Let teachers consider that they should be under no subjection to the control of parents and children; but that they are discharging the functions of a high and honorable office; and as such not to be dictated to, or insulted, by the whims of the narrow minded.

The results of not holding teachers in proper estimation are evident, and does it not show extreme imbecility of mind in those who wish to lower them in the opinion of their children, or consider them in that light, and yet patronize them.

It is strange that parents act thus! But were they to reflect deeply, and consider seriously, how much depends on cultivating proper habits, and dispositions, in children, and giving their minds a proper bias and direction at first, they would in many instances act far otherwise.

BEAUTIFUL SACRED POEM.

(TRANSLATED FROM THE RUSSIAN.)

GOD.

O thou, Eternal One! whose presence bright
All space doth occupy—all motion guide;
Unchanged through time's all devastating flight,
Thou only God! there is no God beside.
Being above all beings, mighty One!
Whom none can comprehend and none explore,
Who fill'st existence with thyself alone,
Embracing all, supporting, ruling o'er!
Being whom we call God, and know no more!

In its sumblime research, philosophy
May measure out the ocean deep—may count
The sands, or the sun's rays—but God! for thee
There is no weight nor measure. None can mount
Up to thy mysteries. Reason's bright spark,
Though kindled by thy light, in vain would try
To trace thy counsels, infinite and dark;
And thought is lost ere thought can soar so high,
Even like past moments in eternity.

Thou from primeval nothingness didst call
First chaos, then existence—Lord, on thee
Eternity had its foundation: all
Sprung forth from thee—of light, joy, harmony
Sole origin—all life, all beauty there;
Thy word word created all, and doth create;
Thy splendor fills all space with day divine:
Thou art, and wast, and shall be, glorious great!
Life-giving, life-sustaining potentate.

Thy chains the unmeasured universe surround,
Upheld by thee—by thee inspired with breath!
Thou the beginning with the end hast bound,
And beautifully mingled life and death!
As sparks mount upward from the fiery blaze,
So sons are born, so worlds spring forth from thee:
And as the spangles in the sunny rays
Shine around the silver snow, the pageantry
Of heaven's bright army glitters in thy praise.

A million torches lighted by thy hand,
Wander unwearied, through the blue abyss;
They own thy power accomplish thy command,
All gay with life, all eloquent with bliss,
What shall we call them? Piles of crystal light?
A glorious company of golden streams?
Lamps of celestial ether burning bright?
Suns lighting systems with their joyous beams?
But thou to them art as the moon to night.

Yes, as the drop of water in the sea,
All this magnificence in thee is lost;
What are ten thousand worlds compared with thee?
And what am I, then? Heaven's unnumbered host,
Though multiplied by myriads, and array'd
In all the glory of sublimest thought,
Is but an atom in the balance weighed
Against thy greatness—is a cipher brought Against infinity. What am I, then? Naught.

Naught!—but the effluence of thy light divine,
Pervading worlds, hath reached my bosom, too;
Yes: in my spirit doth thy Spirit shine,
As shines the sunbeam in a drop of dew.
Naught! but I live, and on Hope's pinions fly,
Eager toward thy presence? for in thee
I live, and breathe, and dwell, a-piring high:
E'en to the throne of thy divinity.
I am, O God, and surely thou must be!

Thou art! directing, guiding all thou art!
Direct my understanding, then, to thee;
Control my spirit, guide my wandering heart.
Though but an atom 'midst immensity,
Still I am something, fashioned by thy hand!
I hold a middle rank, 'twixt heaven and earth,
On the last verge of mortal being stand,
Close to the realm where angels have their birth,
Just off the boundaries of the spirit land.

THOMAS BLUMBLE.

HOW HE GOT MARRIED.

Blumble boasted of being a confirmed bachelor, and took pride in being called a woman hater. I mean Thomas Blumble, of the importing and jobbing house "Hood, Stiver & Blumble." He was very fond of letting people know that he disregarded the charms of the softer sex, and was frequently heard to say that he would like to see the woman that could get him under her thumb. There was a time, of course, when Blumble was susceptible to the overtures of Cupid, because when he was plain "Tom," of fifteen years of age, and left "Rock Cove," came to the city and entered the employ of "Mensor, Tigby & Hood," he left behind him a young "Polly Ann," with many a sigh and tear, and more vows than both put together, to be true till death. For two years he wrote constantly to his Polly Ann, repeating the manifold vows of boyhood love; then he was promoted from boy to entry clerk, and soon after was introduced to a very bewitching young lady whom we may be allowed to call Hattie Elton. Then he forgot his Polly Ann down in Rock Cove, and became very attentive to Miss Elton; he accompanied her to the theatre and made her presents; he got trusted for his new coat, and with the money that should have paid for it they took a sleigh ride to Brighton, and feasted on hot chickens and champagne; to please her he learned to polka and waltz; the shottische and varsoviene were not in vogue then. Things had sped along this way very smoothly for about a year, so Tom, thinking he might as well have the matter settled at once, popped the question. Miss Elton appeared very much surprised; for a moment she remained silent, then lifting up both hands she exclaimed:

"Why, Mr. Blumble,"—she had constantly called him "Tom" for six months previous—"I've been engaged these two years—didn't you know it?"

"Know it? No," replied Blumble, in utter astonishment.

"Why, yes, I've been engaged to Charley Dudley for a long time, and I thought you knew all about it, and was only paying attention to me out of politeness. Charley is in New York now, but we are to be married next Christmas."

"Married next—"

We may guess what Blumble was about to say, but we shall always be in doubt, for instead of finishing his sentence he took his hat and rushed out of the house not even making the parting salutation of "good evening." Perhaps he was afraid to trust his gnashing teeth, for fear they would change his well-meant words into some wicked expression.

Tom, in the privacy of his own chamber, with his door locked, his elbow upon light-stand, and his face quite buried in his hands, reverted to the year's time and the many dollars he had thrown away on Miss Elton; then he thought of poor Polly Ann, whom he had "cut" so shamefully down in Rock Cove, and he decided to write to her, to offer pressing business as an excuse for not having written before, to sue for pardon for past negligence and to assert that his affections were still unaltered and unalterable. So he unburied his face, and penned the tender missive full of falsehoods and stale-love, which he dispatched with the fullest confidence that Polly Ann would be very happy to receive it. But alas for human expectations! Polly Ann's letter came. It was very brief; she told Blumble she had heard of his attentions to the city lady, that she had almost forgotten him and was going to marry Jerry Smike, the village blacksmith, the next week. She returned to Tom his earliest efforts in love-letter writing and a lock of his hair, and requested him to return to her sundry articles in that line that he had received from her.

From that day Blumble announced himself to the world as a woman-hater. He had been false to one woman, and one tricked him. So he cried down the whole sex. The time which Blumble had heretofore divided between love and business was now devoted to business exclusively, and in consequence he received one promotion, after another, until he had the pleasure of seeing his own name third on the sign over the door which he had first entered as an errand boy. I don't believe he remembered that there were any such persons in the world as Hattie Elton and Polly Ann, the first day that the new sign was raised.

It was as the junior member of the firm that Blumble had traveled through the New England States two years ago last fall with samples, receiving orders. During this tour he remained in the pretty little village of P., N. H., one fine night in October. He sat in the bar-room after supper, smoking his segar, until it became filled with the villagers, discussing politics, smoking their pipes, talking of their crops and ogling Hin, all of which was quite uninteresting to him, so he concluded to walk out and view the village by moonlight. He had hardly stepped into the entry, and before he could close the door, ere he heard a voice inquire:—

"Who is that gentleman?"

"His name is Blumble; he's from Boston," replied the landlord.

"Blumble, from Boston?" chimed in a third voice, and then added, "you don't say!" followed by a long low whistle of astonishment.

Blumble stepped off the piazza and walked up the village street. He had scarcely walked twenty yards before he was aware of being followed. Giving the matter but little thought, however, he turned from the road into a pleasant lane that wended its way towards a half dozen farm houses, until he came to a rustic seat, upon which he threw himself and was soon oblivious to all the world except the business affairs of "Hood, Stiver & Blumble." He sat until his segar was consumed, when he was aroused to the world around him by the village clock striking out ten. Buttoning his coat closely around him, he hurried down the lane into the great road, he was suddenly, and not very softly, seized by the throat, by the shoulders and by the coat-tails, by at least a dozen hands. He was rather too much surprised to speak, even if he had a chance to; the hands so tightly clenched around his throat would have prevented his speaking if he had not been so greatly surprised. As he could not speak, he listened very patiently to some half dozen exclamations of, "Now we've got you!"

Something desperate must be done, so Blumble struck the fellow that held him by the throat full in the face, knocking him down, and then cried out, as though he expected this would be the last chance he ever would have to speak:—

"What the deuse are you about?"

This striking question had a miraculous effect upon the numerous hands distributed about his person, and Blumble was free. He waited a few moments to regain his breath, then, looking around him asked, very energetically:—

"What does all this mean?"

"It means that if you don't promise to leave town and not go to see Mary Gay again, we'll just hide you, and then ride you out of town on a rail," said the young man, the recipient of the blow, who had regained his feet.

"Leave town? Mary Gay? Why, I do not understand what you mean," remarked Blumble, considerably mystified.

"Well, sir, interrupted another voice, "we mean that you've come here from Boston to court Mary Gay, and you mean to cut out Bill Higby, here; now, if you don't give up Mary, and leave town tonight, we'll pitch you into the mill-pond.'

"Hold on a moment," said Blumble; "I think you must have got hold of the wrong person, as I have not the acquaintance of Miss Gay, nor, in fact, of any other lady in this place. But I want you to understand one thing distinctly, and that is, I shall not leave town until I get ready."

Something about Blumble's manner seemed to convince the young men that he was in earnest, for they uttered various expressions, such as "That's a likely story." "He's gasing." "I don't believe that." etc. Men invariably express doubts when being convinced of something they had rather not believe.

For a few moments the whole party remained in silence; then one of the young denizens of P. broke the spell by asking:

"Ain't your name Blumble?"

"Yes, sir."

"Are you from Boston?"

"Yes, sir."

"And don't know Mary Gay?"

"No, sir."

"Well, that's strange! She said his name was Blumble, and that's your name; he belongs to Boston, and so do you; now, you've been right up by her house, and we believe you've been there to see her. Don't we, Bill?"

"Yes, we do," replied Higby.

"Well, young men," said Blumble, "if you don't believe me, go ask the young lady herself."

This proposition was met with approval by the whole party, so Blumble started back up the lane, accompanied by a large escort before, behind, and on each side of him. They filed into the yard and crowded on the steps of a neat looking farmhouse, and Higby knocked at the door. In a few moments one of the chamber windows was opened, and a protruding head asked:

"Who's there?"

"Come down to the door a minute, Squire, will you?" asked Bill.

"Why, what do you want?" inquired the voice in the chamber window above.

"We want to see Mary a minute," replied a voice from the crowd below.

Why, she has been abed these two hours. Is it anything important?"

"Yes, we want to see her a minute."

"Well, I'll speak to her."

In a few minutes Mary appeared at the door. She was very good looking, notwithstanding being called out of her bed at such an unseasonable hour and so thought Blumble. For some moments the whole company remained speechless, at last Blumble, tiring of his conspicuous situation, and "nothing to say" spirit of the party, broke the silence by asking the young lady if she had ever seen him before.

"Not that I remember of," she replied.

"I only ask you to satisfy these young men," said Blumble.

"Then he ain't your city beau?" asked Higby.

"No!" as short as though it had been but one letter.

"Then we were mistaken," said a voice in the yard, and two or three of the party slid out of the gate.

"I am sorry that I have been the indirect cause of this annoyance to you but it is no fault of mine. This gentleman,' pointing to Higby, "and his party siezed me and would not allow me to proceed to my hotel until I had proved to them that I had not been visiting you. I must now leave them with you to make their own explanations, and bid you good evening."

"Good evening," said the young lady in a very sweet voice.

Somehow Blumble did'nt sleep very sound that night, he was in a strange place, and he kept constantly thinking of his strange adventure, and of the good looking, strange young lady; and the more he thought, the more he wondered who she was; and when at last he determined to inquire about her in the morning, he fell asleep and dreamed of her.

Blumble was an early riser—bachelors generally are—and the next morning before the villagers were astir, he had walked out and passed the house of Squire Gay; but he did not see Mary.—So he returned to the hotel and inquired of the landlord concerning her. The landlord must have praised the girl, for the bachelor decided to remain another day and be introduced to her, then to remain a third, and finally he concluded he might as well stop the week out, and so wrote to his partners informing them that he should remain there a few days to rest himself. The professed woman-hater walked up that same lane each evening, and walked into the house, too, he was not disturbed again by Bill Higby, for the Squire had threatened that if he came within gunshot of the house again to put a dose of cold lead into him. So the wise but jealous Higby kept out of the way.

There was a great reform in the manner and habits of Thomas Blumble, merchant. He left his bachelor clubs, notwithstanding the jeers and taunts of his former companions, and he became very circumspect in his remarks on female character. For a number of months he spent his spare hours writing to Mary, and choosing appropriate gifts for her, and for a long while the Boston and P. Express considered him one of their best customers. But ere long there was a brilliant wedding party at the house of Squire Gay, and P. lost its most charming belle, for Miss Gay became Mrs. Blumble. A few weeks ago Mr. and Mrs. Blumble went down to Rock Cove and visited the old Blumble homestead; while there Mr. Blumble introduced his wife to Mr. Jerry Smike, and Mrs. Polly Ann Smike and the little Smikes. It would be impossible to tell which is the most contented with: their lot, Thomas or Polly Ann. One thing more and I am done. In answer to Blumble's advertisement for a chambermaid, who would assist in plain sewing, who do you think applied for the situation? You would never guess, so I'll tell you. It was Hattie Elton! Her New York beau heard of her flirtations with Blumble, and for that reason broke his engagement with her; and she, who might have been Mrs. Thomas Blumble, must be content to be Mrs. Blumble's servant.

No Brains.

Judge Ray, the temperance lecture in one of his efforts got off the following hard hit at "moderate drinkers."

"All those who in youth acquire a habit of drinking whiskey, at forty years of age will be total abstainers or drunkards. No person can use whiskey, for years with moderation. If there is a person in the audience before me whose experience disputes this, let him make it known. I will account for it, or acknowledge that I am mistaken."

A tall large man arose, and folding his arms across his breast, said:

"I offer myself as one whose experience contradicts your statements."

"Are you a moderate drinker?"

"I am."

"How long have you drank in moderation?"

"Forty years."

"And never were intoxicated?"

"Never."

"Well," remarked the judge, scanning the subject from head to foot, "yours is a singular case; yet I think it is easily accounted for. I am reminded by it of a little story. A colored man, with a loaf of bread and a bottle of whiskey, sat down to dine, on the bank of a clear stream. In breaking the bread he dropped some crumbs into the water. These were eagerly seized and eaten by the fish. That circumstance suggested to the darkey the idea of dipping the bread into the whiskey and feeding it to them. It worked well. Some of the fish ate it, and became drunk and floated helplessly upon the surface. In this way he easily caught a large number. But in the stream was a large fish, very unlike the rest. It partook freely of the bread and whisky with no perceptible effect. It was shy of every effort of the darkey to take it. He resolved to take it at all hazards, that he might learn its name and nature. He procured a net, and after much effort, caught the fish, carried it to a colored neighbor, and asked his opinion in the matter. The other surveyed the wonder a moment and then said: "Sambo, I understand dis case; dis fish is a mullet head. it aint got any brains." "In other words," added the judge, "alcohol affects only the brain, and, of course, those having none, may drink without injury." The storm of laughter which followed, drove the "moderate drinker" from the house.

The Strong-minded Women.

Who are they? For the most part, with a few honorable exceptions, they are free-thinkers, Unitarians, Universalists, Spirituals, and misguided women, advocating doctrines not only in direct opposition to those taught in the Bible, but which would undermine the very pillars of the social fabric, in breaking down family government and order, and nullifying the institution of marriage the ordinance of God.

Who are they? They are those who seek notoriety, and would unsex themselves even in outward appearance. They are the clamorous, defiant revolutionary politicians of modern days, who would overthrow the Government if they could and usurp the place of man, even on the Judge's bench and in the halls of Congress.

Who are they? They are those who would invade even the sacred desk, and arrogantly assume the functions of ministers of Christ, in direct contradiction to the words of an inspired Apostle: "I permit not a woman to speak in the Church." They are the rude, the masculine, the brazen-faced, the immodest. They are the ambitious, who, like Milton's devil, adopt as their motto, "Rather reign in hell than serve in Heaven." They are the restless, dissatisfied with home, and the neglecters and despisers of domestic duties. They are those who, with some talent and a little knowledge, and puffed up with a profound sense of their own wisdom, fancy they could manage the affairs of the nation a little better than the other sex had they the reigns of government.

Who are they? They are those who publicly ridicule and denounce the headship of man, and claim an equal right with him to rule in the family or the State.

Who are they? They are, in short, those who quarrel with God's arrangements, and in their hearts complain their Maker had not made them men.

It is one of the beautiful compensations of this life that no one can sincerely try to help another without helping himself.

The husks of emptiness rustle in every wind; the full corn in the ear holds up its golden fruit noiselessly to the Lord of the harvest.

WEALTH, FAME, LOVE AND TRUTH

BY REV. S. S. ANDROS.

"Oh! give me Wealth!" he said, and lo!
The pebble caught the diamond's glow;
The mountain-crag valley mould
Burned with the hues of gem and gold:
He had his prayer—'twas his, the whole—
But grief sat heavy on his soul.

"Oh! give me Fame!"—the laurel-bough
Twined with the oak to wreathe his brow;
The trumpet pealed, and poet's lyre
Breathed forth his praise in words of fire:
He had his prayer—'twas his, the whole—
But grief sat heavy on his soul.

"Oh! give me Love!"—bright lips were there
Fair brows—than Parian stone more fair;
And eyes, of loveliness undreamed,
With beauty's glorious spirit beamed:
He had his prayer—'twas his, the whole—
Yet grief sat heavy on his soul.

"Oh! give me"—"stay," a soft voice came:
"Wealth has been thine, and Love and Fame;
Ask not again, but give thy youth,
Time, being, spirit—all—to Truth;
And then, though clouds without thee roll,
Light—light shall rest upon thy soul."

IN THE NAME AND BY THE AUTHORITY OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF PENN'A.

JOHN W. GEARY, Gov.

Thanksgiving Proclamation.

Believing in the Lord, our covenant God in whom our fathers trusted, and in His controlling Providence over the affairs of men and nations, a public acknowledgment of His goodness and of our constant dependence upon Him is eminently becoming an enlightened and civilized people. Now, therefore, impressed with these sentiments, in pursuance of a revered custom, and in conformity with the Proclamation of Ulysses S. Grant, President of the United States, recommending that Thursday, the 28th day of November next, be set apart as a day of Praise, Prayer and Thanksgiving; I, JOHN W. GEARY, Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, do most respectfully request the citizens of this State to observe that day as such, with all due respect and solemnity. Let thanks be given to Almighty God that he has bestowed upon us all the common blessings of life, given us health, and relieved us from pestilence; that labor is abundantly rewarded; that we have no dread of impending famine, or fear of industrial or commercial distress; that the arts, sciences, general education, and the sentiments of peace and good will are steadily advancing. Let us be especially thankful for the great privileges of American citizenship; for the untrammelled expression of opinion; that our political rights still remain safe under beneficent laws and in the hands of an order loving people; and that "equal and exact justice" is vouchsafed to all. For these, and for all other civil, social, and religious blessings we enjoy, let us yield the sincere tribute of grateful hearts, and humbly beseech their continuance.

Given under my hand and the great seal of the State, at Harrisburg, this twenty-eighth day of October, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two, and of the Commonwealth the ninety-seventh.

By the Governor,

JOHN W. GEARY.

F. JORDAN, Sect. of the Commonwealth.

GEMS OF THOUGHT.

—Knowledge may increase sin if the heart be not educated as well as the head.

—Little minds are tamed and subdued by misfortune, but great minds rise above it.

—The poor guest is usually best pleased with being well treated, and least likely to get it.

—If any one has stumbled and fallen, help him up gently, and pass on, before a crowd gathers.

—Let an independent thinker show a fearless fidelity to his convictions, and the shafts of bigotry and envy fall helpless and harmless at his feet.

—Interesting thoughts and feelings are the comets of the mind. They transit off. How can they be made fixed stars, and thus the mind's firmament become ever resplendent?

—Modern thought is so vague and its expression so inadequate, that terseness, clearness and accuracy of thought and expression will always command attention.

—Education is not learning; it is the exercise and development of the powers of the mind. There are two great methods by which this end may be accomplished; it may be done in the halls of learning, or in the conflicts of life.

—The greatest thing a humane soul ever does in this world is to see something, and tell what it saw in a plain way. Hundreds of people can talk for one who can think, but thousands can think for one who can see. To see clearly, is poetry, prophecy and religion, all in one.

—There is nothing that this age, from whatever standpoint we survey it, needs more physically, intellectually and morally, than thorough ventilation.

—No cosmetics, no arts of dress, no studied adjustment of light and shade, can adorn the human face or form, like health. The perfection of all colors on earth is flesh-color, which blends them all in one in the mortal face of an immortal, and the perfection of that is seen only in the rosy tint of health.

An Old But Good Story.

A countryman walked into the office of General Barnes one day, and began his application:

"General Barnes, I have come to get your advice in a case that is giving me some trouble."

"Well, what is the matter?"

"Suppose now," said the client, "that a man had a fine spring of water on his land, and his neighbor living below him was to build a dam across a creek running through both their farms, and it was to back the water up into the other man's spring, what ought to be done?"

"Sue him, sir, sue him by all means," said the general, who always became excited in proportion to the aggravation of his client's wrongs. "You can recover heavy damages, sir. It is a most flagrant injury he has done you, sir, and the law will make him pay well for it, sir. Just give me the case, and I'll bring the money from him; and if he hasn't a good deal of property it will break him up, sir."

"But stop, General," cried the terrified applicant for legal advice, "it's me that built the dam, and it's neighbor Jones that owns the spring, and he's threatened to sue me!"

The keen lawyer hesitated but a moment before he tacked ship and kept on:

"Ah! Well, sir, you say you built a dam across that creek. What sort of a dam was that sir?"

"It was a mill dam."

"A mill-dam for grinding grain, was it?"

"So it is, sir; you may well say so, sir."

"Yes, it was just that."

"And it is a good neighborhood mill, is it?"

"And all the neighbors bring their grain here to be ground, do they?"

"Yes, sir, all but Jones."

"Then it is a great public convenience, is it not?"

"To be sure it is. I would not have built it but for that. It's so far to any other mill, sir."

"And now, said the old lawyer, you tell me that that man Jones is complaining just because the water from your dam happens to back up into his little spring, and he is threatening to sue you. Well, all I have to say is, let him sue, and he'll rue the day he ever thought of it, as sure as my name is Barnes."

Anything Else But Sorry.

Once upon a time, a big, strapping, awkward youth, fresh from Vermont, entered the Dunbar Academy at Byfield, Mass., for a little erudition, which is doled out at this Temple of Minerva at economical prices. At that place—we know not how it is at present—the boys and girls were kept in one apartment; only the middle aisle parted them. One day this Vermont stripling, who had been helping one of the girls through a hard sum—he was acute in cyphering—thought it not more than fair that he should take toll for his valuable services; accordingly he threw his stalwart arm around the rosy damsel and gave her a sly, rousing smack which started the whole assembly.

"Jedediah Tower, come up here," roared the preceptor.

The delinquent appeared his face glowing with blushes like a red hot warming pan—and looking as sly as a ninny.

"Hold out your hand, sir" said the pedagogue. "I'll teach you not to act thus in this institution."

The huge paw was extended to a horizontal line towards the instructor, who surveyed its broad surface with a mathematical eye—calculating how many strokes of his small ferule it would take to cover the large number of square inches it contained.

"Jedediah," at length he said, "this is the first time you have been called upon for any delinquency; now, sir, if you will say you are sorry for what you have done, I will let you off this time without punishment.

"Sorry!" exclaimed the youngster, striking an attitude of pre indignation; "sorry! no sir! I am not. And I will do just so again if I have a chance. So put on, old fellow, just as hard as you like.—By the jumpin' Jehosaphat, I'd stand here and let you lick me till kingdom cum afore I'd be sorry for that—by thunder I would."

CUMULATIVE VOTING.

THE MAJORITY NO LONGER TO RULE.

The Hon. Charles R. Buckalew, says the Pittsburgh Mail, has published a book on what he calls "Proportional Representation." It is really on comulative voting, a thing of which he has constituted himself, in an especial manner, the godfather. The book is an octavo volume of 300 pages; it is edited by John G. Freeze, counsellor at law, and the same gentleman who resigned to give Mr. Buckalew a seat in the Convention; and it doubtless contains everything that can be said in favor of the gentleman's pet bantling.

The book, as well as its subject, gives rise to several reflections. As long as the Democrats had a majority of the votes they recognized as peculiarly sacred the principle that the majority must rule and the minority submit. They held then, and held rightly, that this principle lies at the root of every Republican government, and that without it no such government is possible. But the radical change, which threw them out of power and into a hopeless minority, overturned their belief in regard to this matter, compelled them to abandon the principle that the majority must govern, and sent them on a roving expedition to find something to take its place. What they actually hit upon to take its place is, that the Democratic party, notwithstanding it is in such an insignificant a minority, must still govern, and, as it would not do to state it in that plain, straight-forward way, they sugar-coated it by baptizing it "Proportional Representation." Mr. Buckalew, as the high priest, presiding at the font.

But, to use a slang phrase, the thing is too thin. Its innate ugliness cannot be concealed by any such coating. No matter what garments it may be clothed in, the people will see in it the old, ugly, pro-slavery Democratic leader's ravenous for place and power, and will treat it accordingly. We often hear of still born books. This one of Mr. Buckalew's will be a remarkable specimen of the class. But it will not alone be still born, its condemation went before hand. The people were aware on the second Tuesday of October last that cumulative voting was Mr. Buckalew' peculiar hobby, and on that day they proclaimed their condemnation of him and of his hobby as well. That the book will be powerless for evil in the convention we are absolutely certain. Cumulative voting is nothing but a straw caught at by the drowning Democratic leaders to save themselves. But it will be in vain. The people have decreed that they shall go under, and no struggling or subterfuge that they can resort to will prevent the decree from being carried into effect.

much from a sympathy with the opposition as from what they believe to be impartiality in office. They want to appear so straightforward that they get over-plumb. Chase went to seed so soon as he went upon the Supreme Bench. As a lawyer, no man had clearer views of the great rights of the American people; as a Judge, those rights were befogged in a mist of Constitutional doubts. This official going to seed seems to be indiginous to Republican party plants. We raise up men to positions of honor and profit, and while they are going up they show no signs of premature heading; but so soon as they reach a certain height, nourished by the rains of Republican sentiment, like an onion, they shoot up to seed in a single night, bearing a fungus of conservatism—a mushroom growth, the result mainly of a vanity to be esteemed superlatively fair in office. I have no doubt Mr. McAllister justifies his action from the conservative standpoint that in a Constitutional Convention there should be no politics. So I say; but even there the rights of the majority ought not to be sacrificed to the minority. And, just here let me say that the law creating the Constitutional Convention is a fraud upon the majority of the people. It is a cheat gotten up by Buckalew, and under the pretense of affording the minority a fair representation, it has robbed the majority of at least ten delegates which rightfully belong to it. It is the majority that is not represented in the Convention. The Republicans have 69 members and the Democrats 64, and yet we polled over 40,000 more votes than they. Then again, it put men into the Convention who could have got in, in no other way. The idea of so framing a law that there can be no way of defeating a man nominated for an office, is, to me, a bold confession that the people cannot be trusted. But the body has been made and his commenced its work, and we will have to get along the best way we can with our imperfect and dishonest representation.

EX-GOV CURTIN AND THE "COLORED MAN."

The Daily Clearfield Herald says: Ex Governor Curtin has gone over to the enemy both body and breeches. In the Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention he votes steadily with the Democrats, his last performance being a vote against the election of the Republican nominee for Sergeant-at arms, because he was a colored man. The Curtin has fallen, indeed.

The Lewistown (Pa.) Gazette, speaking of the Candidates in the Constitutional Convention for clerkships, &c., says—

A strong effort was made to prevent the election of these officers, who are republicans, and although Meredith of Philadelphia, and McAllister of Centre follow the course, they were all elected. The next onslaught was made on Cassius M. Brown, formerly of this place, a colored man respected by all who knew him, and what will strike all as very singular, Andrew G. Curtin voted with the democrats to dispense with his services, but the motion was unsuccessful.

The Harrisburg Patriot, the Central Democratic organ, and Ex-Gov. Curtin's especial defender, hints, but does not declare, that Mr. Curtin's action was dictated by notions of economy. At the same time the 'Patriot' admits that Ex Gov. Curtin was never troubled with especial regard for the colored man—which we add, is true—but which is a poor defence at this time for Ex-Gov Curtin.

Judge Woodward is usually credited with strong Democratic leanings, and so are Lewis C. Cassidy, Esq., and Robert Lamberton, Esq., but with all that they are gentlemen. They voted to retain the Assistant Sergeant-at-arms; Ex-Gov. Curtin did not. But the Assistant Sergeant at-arms was elected for all that.—'National Progress.'

"GOING TO SEED."

Going to seed, is the expressive term applied by the Harrisburg correspondent of the Altoona Radical to those Republicans who forget their obligations to the party which promotes them politically. Alluding to the fact that Mr. McAllister, Republican, voted with the Democracy in the organization of the Constitutional Convention, the correspondent says.

"The action of Mr. McAllister in joining hands with the Democracy is only another evidence of the proneness of men to go to seed. It arises not as

WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL,
NATURE'S GREAT REMEDY
FOR THE Throat & Lungs.

It is gratifying to us to inform the public that Dr. L. Q. C. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial, for Throat and Lung Diseases, has gained an enviable reputation from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast, and from thence to some of the first families of Europe, not through the press alone, but by persons throughout the States actually benefitted and cured at his office. While he publishes less, so say our reporters, he is unable to supply the demand. It gains and holds its reputation—

First. Not by stopping cough, but by loosening and assisting nature to throw off the unhealthy matter collected about the throat and bronchial tubes, which causes irritation.

Second. It removes the cause of irritation (which produces cough) of the mucous membrane and bronchial tubes, assists the lungs to act and throw off the unhealthy secretions, and purifies the blood.

It is free from squills, lobelia, ipica and opium, of which most throat and lung remedies are composed, which allay cough only, and disorganize the stomach. It has a soothing effect on the stomach, acts on the liver and kidneys and lymphatic and nervous regions, thus reaching to every part of the system, and in its invigorating and purifying effects it has gained a reputation which it must hold above all others in the market.

500! 500! 500! 500! 500!

Manufactured and Sold Daily, of the

NEW IMPROVED ELIAS HOWE SEWING MACHINE!

THE GREATEST PRODUCTION OF INVENTIVE GENIUS, POINTS OF SUPRIORITY, BEAUTY, CONVENIENCE & DURABILITY. IT WILL LAST A LIFE TIME.

ALL of its wearing parts are made of hardened steel, has no Cog Wheels to Break or Rattle; great adjustability, (self-adjusting take-up) adjustable needle-head, will sew light or heavy goods perfect; makes the nicest hem or fell; will gather and sew on, Cord, Tuck, Braid, Binde, Embroider, or will do any kind of work, even make Crotchet Work Perfect.

This Machine makes the celebrated Lock stitch—the stitch invented by Mr. Howe—alike on both sides. The shuttle tension is upon the thread as it leaves the shuttle, and not upon the bobbin, as in most machines; and this tension is invariable whether the bobbin be full or nearly empty. It is obtained by turning a screw in the shuttle, and can be changed in a moment, without taking out the work, breaking the thread, or threading through holes—This Machine is now hung on hinges, and the trouble of taking it from the table to clean and oil obviated.

What we claim, in substance, is, that this is an Honest Machine, and if put in your family, will do any and all of your work perfectly, will last a lifetime, is a willing and ready servant, and is not subject to FITS.

Persons who have tried all machines are unanimous in declaring this to be the easiest learned of any in the market. In the majority of cases customers learn from the instruction book without further aid.

This Machine is now for sale in your county by Traveling Agents. If you are not called on by them, and you want the Best Machine for the amount of money you pay out, please address I. F. PALMER & CO., Bellefonte, Pa., or, Philipsburg, Pa., either of which places you may live nearest to, and your order will receive prompt attention in person.—Our Machines are sold on easy terms—either by monthly installments, or by NOTE, CASH or PRODUCE at Market Prices. Needles, Oil, Thread and Extra Attachments constantly on hand at our offices. Office at Bellefonte, in Garman's Hotel Building. Call and see styles and sample work.

THE GALLOWS.

EXECUTION OF GEORGE GRANT AT WEST CHESTER—THE INCIDENTS.

George Grant, a colored man, was hanged Wednesday, 13 inst., in the yard of the county prison of Chester for the murder of his wife's aunt, on October 3, 1871. His trial came off in the October court. The testimony went clearly towards conviction, and he jury brought in a verdict of murder in the first degree. Sentence was pronounced in February, 1872. The Governor subsequently sent to the Sheriff the death warrant, which fixed Wednesday as the fatal day.

Grant's life may be summed up as follows: Rev. Jos. S. Evans, a Baptist minister, who has been attending the prisoner in a spiritual capacity devotedly, had been with him since Tuesday night. He could observe in him no repentance—not the slightest expression of remorse. He remained sullen, gloomy, desperate, throughout the interviews with Mr. Evans—so much so that Mr. Evans was never for a moment certain of his personal safety during the time that he was with him. Towards the last hour great care was taken that he should be carefully watched. Certain specials of the prison guarded him from watch to watch. Grant slept from ten o'clock on Tuesday night until four o'clock Wednesday morning.

At 6 o'clock the Rev. Mr. Evans entered his cell. All prayers entreaties, and appeals were of no avail. Grant made no confession. He wanted to see his wife and some other friends. As to the wife, it was generally surmised that she had helped in the attempts to escape which he had on two occasions made, and that the new auger the new saw, and the other instruments found in his cell had been pratical evidence of wifely devotion to her husband in defiance to law. She disappeared last Thursday, and has not been heard of since.

WONDERFUL NERVE.

At ten o'clock quite an assemblage was gathered within the outer office of the prison, admission being limited to prominent gentlemen of the county and to members of the press.

The wonderful nerve of the condemned was made very clear. At 6 o'clock he ate his breakfast. At 10:40 this man of courage, that under the circumstances was marvelous, asked for a mince pie. Sheriff Gill, to whom the request was made, had no mince pie, but he could secure a blackbury pie, and one was given to George, who ate it apparently with a keen relish. At 10:55 Deputy Sheriff McFarland read the death warrant in the outer hall, and qualified his deputies with their hats off. At 11 o'clock Sheriff Gill, Deputy Sheriff McFarland and Mr. Lewis Evans entered the cell. A considerable time was occupied in filing off the manacles of the prisoner. While this was being done, and his arms having been pinioned, a crowd gathered in the yard, where the gallows had been placed.

THE DEATH-YARD.

At 11:20 the prisoner entered the death-yard, walking between Sheriff Gill and Mr. Lewis Evans. He advanced with a quiet movement, utterly devoid of nervousness, up the steps that led to the scaffold. There was placed, in a terrible mockery of the idea of comfort which it seems intended to convey, the stool. Grant would not sit on it. Four men were present on the scaffold—the prisoner, Sheriff Gill, Deputy Sheriff McFarland, and Rev. Dr. Evans. The man who, of right, was most solemnly affected by the event, seemed to be the least touched. Bound as he was, he stood up with as bold a look as ever a bold man had held in his life. But he remained quiet and unobtrusive during the whole of the preliminaries to his actual execution, and it was only when the black cap was being pulled down over his face that he said, "I don't want to have this cap over my face; I want to see."

Mr. Evans answered that it was according to the law, and he would have to submit. Grant said "If you ask the Sheriff he won't say anything." The same answer having been made, the man's resolution seemed to settle itself into silence, and without another word, save a whisper "My trust is in God" to Mr. Evans, standing close to him, awaited, with covered head, his fate. One by one Sheriff Gill, Deputy Sheriff McFarland and Mr Evans shook him by the hand and bid him adieu; and then, left alone for that single, fearful moment, which no one can appreciate save him who stands a criminal in the sight of an outraged law,

THE DROP FELL,

and George Grant, after falling two feet and four inches, and whirling around three times, making four muscular, not convulsive, efforts of the limbs, finally settled himself with his face towards the platform—the rope well up at the back of the neck—and gradually yielded another human life to the awful dignity of human justice.

Sunshine

Do what you can to make sunshine in the world. Lift up the curtain

We don't mean the curtains which darken the spirit of your brother, your friend your neighbor or even of a stranger, if the curtain strings are within your convenient reach.

Lift up the curtains and let the sunshine in! Light is better than darkness and how cheap it is!

A kind and cheering word to one who is in trouble, and is perplexed, and almost discouraged, a word of heartfelt sympathy to the afflicted; a loving word of counsel to the young; a word of assurance to the doubting; a "soft word which, though it butters no parsnips, turneth away wrath," to the prejudiced and unreasonably provoked; all such words as these are sunshine to those to whom they are spoken

"I have never found anything else so cheap and so useful as politeness," said an old traveler to us once.

He then went on to state that, early in life finding how useful it was, frequently to strangers, to give them some information of which they were in search, and which he possessed, he had adopted the rule always to help everybody he could in such little opportunities as were constantly offering in his travels.

The result was, that, out of the merest trifles of assistance, rendered in this way had grown some of the pleasantest and most valuable acquaintances that he had ever formed.

How many great men have testified that their whole lives have been influenced by some single remark made to them in their boyhood.

And who cannot recall words spoken to himself in his childhood, to which, prehaps, the speaker attached no importance but which sunk deep and immovable into his memory, and which have never lost their power over him?

Anecdote of Pope.

Most of our readers have, doubtless, heard of the sharpe rejoinder once made to Alexnader Pope, whereby a pointed hit was made at his diminutive and ill shapen figure, but many may never have heard the particulars o the occasion. They were as follows:

Pope was, one evening, at Burton's Coffee House, where himself, and Swift, and Aburthnot, with several other scholars, were pouring over a manuscript copy of the Greek Aristophanes. At length they came across a sentence which they could not comprehend, and as, in their perplexity, they talked rather loudly, they attracted the attention of a young officer, who chanced to be in another part of the room, and who approached, and begged leave to look at the passage.

"O, by all means" said Pope, sarcastically. "Let the young gentleman look at it. We shall have light directly."

The young officer took up the manuscript volume, and, after a little study and consideration, his countenance brightened.

"It is but a slight omission on the part of the scribe," he said. "It only wants a note of interrogation at this point to make the whole intelligible."

Pope saw in an instant that the officer was right; but the thought of being out-done in Greek translation by a mere youth, and a red coat at that, piqued him, and, with a sharp, bitter twang, he cried out,—

"And pray, young sir, what is a note of interrogation?"

"A note of interrogation," answered the officer surveying the wizened, hunch backed poet from head to foot with a contemptuous look, is a little crooked thing that asks questions?"

	317760		211961
Majority	35627		137728

The number of votes cast is 561,650, of which Grant and Wilson received 349,689, and Greeley and Brown 211,961, giving the Republican candidates a majority on the popular vote of 137,728.

Of the 31 counties which voted for Buckalew in October 19 cast their ballots for Grant and Wilson leaving 12 for the Greeley and Brown electors. The counties which changed from the Democratic to the Republican side of the state are: Adams, Bedford, Bucks, Cambria, Carbon, Centre, Clarion, Clinton, Cumberland, Favette, Juniata, Luzerne, Montgomery Montour, Northumberland, Schuylkill, Wayne, Westmoreland and Wyoming. Those sticking to Greeley, but in a most shaky manner, are: Berks, Clearfield, Columbia, Elk, Fulton, Greene, Lehigh, Monroe, Northampton, Pike, Sullivan, and York, all with majorities enormously reduced when compared with the October vote—Buckalew's majorities in these being 20,021, and Greeley's 8,808. From this showing it is evident that the Democrats were better content to accept General Grant than to endorse Greeley.

The October vote was heavier than the November one, from the fact that both parties felt that it would virtually decide the Presidential election. The total then was 671,147, showing that 109,497 persons who cast their ballots for Hartranft and for Buckalew remained away from the polls at the Presidential election. Of that total Hartranft received 353,387 votes and Buckalew 317,760, the former's majority being 35,627. The vote for the Republican electors is 349,689, indicating a loss from Hartranft's vote of 3,698, while the Democratic Liberals lost from Buckalew's vote, 105,799 to which add 3,698, and we have the number of citizens who voting in October declined to use their right at the November election.

In 1868 President Grant received 342,280 votes in this State, to 313,382 for Seymour, the total vote being 655,652, and his increase this year on 1868, is 7,409, while Greeley falls off from Seymour's vote 101,421. These figures speak for themselves, and we leave the subject of the late election for the contemplation of our readers without any comment.

BUSINESS PRINCIPLES.—Two parties entering into a contract are mutually bound by its provisions until it is filled. If either party violate the terms of the agreement, the contract is rendered void. When a person voluntarily enters into an engagement to discharge certain duties, whether it be a lawyer with his client, a physician with his patient, an agent for a company, or in any other professional or business relation, so soon as he makes up his mind to act otherwise than the stipulations specified, he is bound by the laws of business honor to inform the other party of his change, and to cease from receiving fees or wages from those whose expectations are to be disappointed so far as his services are concerned.

AN APPEAL!

To Debilitated Persons,
To Dispeptics,
To suffers from Liver Complaint
To those having no Appetite,
To those with broken down Constitutions
To Nervous People,
To Children Wasting Away,
To any with debilitated digestive Organs

Or suffering with any of the following Symptoms, which indicate Disordered Stomach or Liver.

such as Constipation, Inward Piles, Fullness or Blood to the Head, Acidity of the Stomach, Nausea, Heartburn, Disgust for food, Fullness or Weight in the Stomach, Sour Eructations, Sinking or Fluttering at Pit of the Stomach, Swimmings of the Head, Hurried and difficult breathing, Fluttering at the Heart, Choking or suffocating Sensations when in a Lying Posture, Dimness of Vision, Dots or Webs before the Sight, Fever and Dull Pain in the Head, Deficiency of Perspiration, Yellowness of the Skin and Eyes, Pain in the Side, Back, Chest, Limbs, &c., Sudden Flushes of Heat, Burning in the Flesh, Constant Imaginings of Evil, and Great Depression of Spirits.

Hoofland's German Bitters.

A Bitters without Alcohol or Spirits of any kind.

Is different from all others. It is composed of the pure Juices, or VITAL PRINCIPLE OF ROOTS, HERBS, and BARKS, (or, as medicinally termed, Extracts,) the worthless or inert portions of the ingredients not being used. Therefore in one Bottle of this Bitters there is contained as much medicinal virtue as will be found in several gallons or ordinary mixtures. The Roots, &c., used in this Bitters are grown in Germany, their vital principles extracted in that country by a scientific Chemist, and forwarded to the manufactory in this city, when they compounded and bottled. Containing no spirituous ingredients, this Bitters is free from the objections urged against all others: no desire for stimulants can be induced from their use, they cannot make drunkards, and cannot under any circumstances, have any but a beneficial effect.

Hoofland's German Tonic,

Was compounded for those not inclined to extreme bitters, and is intended for use in cases when some alcoholic stimulant is required in connection with the Tonic properties of the Bitters. Each bottle of the tonic contains one bottle of the Bitters, combined with pure SANTA CRUZ RUM, and flavored in such a manner that the extreme bitterness of the bitters is overcome forming a preparation highly agreeable and pleasant to the palate, and containing the medicinal virtues of the Bitters. The price of the Tonic is $1,50 per Bottle, which many persons think too high. They must take into consideration that the stimulant used is guaranteed to be of a pure quality. A poor article could be furnished at a cheaper price, but is it not better to pay a little more and have a good article? A medicinal preparation should contain none but the best ingredients; and they who expect to obtain a cheap compound, and be benefitted by it, will most certainly be cheated.

PHILADELPHIA, March 16, 1871.

I find "Hoofland's German Bitters" is a good tonic, useful in diseases of the digestive organs, and of great benefit in case of debility and want of nervous action in the system. Yours truly,

GEO. W. WOODWARD.

HON. JAS. THOMPSON, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania,

PHILADELPHIA, April 28, 1867.

I consider "Hoofland's German Bitter" a valuable medicine in case of attacks of indigestion or Dyspepsia. I can certify this from my own experience of it.

HON. GEORGE SHARSWOOD, Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, June 1, 1868.

I have found by experience that "Hoofland's German Bitters" is a very good tonic, relieving dyspeptic symptoms almost directly.

GEORGE SHARSWOOD

HON. JAS. M. WOOD, Ex-Mayor of Williamsport, Pa.

I take great pleasure in recommending "Hoofland's German Tonic" to any one who may be afflicted with Dyspepsia. I had the Dyspepsia so badly it was impossible to keep any food on my stomach, and I became so weak, as not to be able to walk half a mile. Two bottles of Tonic effected a perfect cure. JAMES M. DR. HOOFLAND'S PODOPHYLLIN,

Or Substitue for Mercury Pills.

TWO PILLS A DOSE.

The Most Powerful, Yet Innocent Vegetable Cathartic Known.

It is not necessary to take a handful of these Pills to produce the desired effect; two of them act quickly and powerfully, cleansing the Liver, Stomach and Bowels all impurities. The principal ingredient is Podophyllin, or the Alcoholic Extract of Mandrake, which is by many times more powerful, acting and searching than the Mandrake itself. Its peculiar action is upon the Liver, cleaning it speedily from all obstructions, with all the power of Mercury, yet free from the injurious results attached to the use of that mineral.

For all diseases, in which the use of a cathartic is indicated, these pills will give entire satisfaction in every case. They NEVER FAIL.

In cases of Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia and extreme costiveness, Dr. Hoofland's German Bitters or Tonic should be used in connection with the Pills. The tonic effect of the Bitters or Tonic builds up the system. The Bitters or Tonic purifies the Blood, strengthens the Nerves, REGULATES the Liver, and gives strength, energy and vigor.

Keep your Bowels active with the Pills, and tone up the system with Bitters or Tonic, and no disease can retain its hold, or ever assail you.

Recollect that it is DR. HOOFLAND'S GERMAN REMEDIES that are so universally used and highly recommended; and do not allow the Druggist to induce you to take anything else that he may say is just as good, because he makes a larger profit on it. These Remedies will be sent by Express to any locality, upon application to the PRINCIPAL OFFICE, at the GERMAN MEDICINE STORE, 631 Arch St., Philadelphia.

RUN-AWAY.—On Saturday night, the 16th inst., Mr. Joseph Emerick, who resides near Nittany Hall, in Walker township, met with a very serious accident. He had been at Zion to see his lady-love, as we are informed, and remained with her beyond the "Wee sma' hours ot the night," when he started for home. Just above Snydertown his horse took fright and ran away, upsetting the buggy. The horse tore loose from the buggy and ran home. Mr. Emerick was thrown under the buggy and his head was badly, but not seriously cut. He is a juryman this week on the trial of Thomas Hickey for the murder of Albert Rider. Mr. Emerick no doubt thinks that Zion "is a hard road to travel."

HORSE DISEASE.—The horses belonging to the different livery men of Bellefonte, are all, or nearly all, suffering from the horse disease.—Many other horses in town have also been attacked. The horses belonging to the mail contractor between this place and Lewistown, were attacked on Wednesday of last week, so severely, that they have been stabled ever since. The result is our Pennsvalley readers, will, in all probability, receive no mail, either letters or papers until the epizootic subsides. Our gentlemanly Post Master and the Mail Contractors are doing all in their power to have the mails delivered. No blame can attach to them. Patience friends, things will soon be moving again in regular order, and in the mean time, we hope that all will learn from this horse affliction to treat the noble animal with more kindness in the future.

SHOOTING AFFRAY.—A horrible shooting affray occurred at the Planing Mill of Messrs. William Campbell & Son, in Central City, on yesterday about 10 o'clock, A. M. Perry Campbell, a son of Wm. Campbell, has been in New York city for some two or three years, until about six months before the October election, when he returned to his father and went to work in the Planing Mill. It appears that his residence in the city of New York, neither improved his temper nor his morals. About three months since he quarrelled with his brothers and struck his father a severe blow with a plate.

Yesterday, although we have not learned the particulars, we suppose the embers of the old fued were rekindled, whereupon a quarrel ensued between Perry and his brothers William and George Campbell, which resulted in the shooting of William Campbell by Perry. He, it is said, discharged five shots at his two brothers, two of which struck William, one in the shoulder, the other in the neck. George escaped unharmed. Perry, up to this writing, has not been arrested.

PROTRACTED MEETING.—Rev. Smyser, preacher in charge of the M. E. Church in this place, commenced a protracted meeting on last Sabbath. Mr. Smyser is an able preacher, feels his responsibility as a minister, and is most earnestly engaged in the work of winning souls to Christ. On last Sabbath he preached two sermons. They were both good; but the sermon in the morning was a great one, clear, concise and powerful. It defined the duty of christians to each other and their duties as members of society and to the whole brotherhood of man. There will be meeting in the church every night this week except Saturday night.

On Sabbath morning at 10½ o'clock, Rev. Andrew J. Myers will preach in the M. E. Church. Rev. Myers, it will be remembered, was our preacher in charge about 18 years ago, the first after Bellefonte became a station.—Many of our citizens will, no doubt, remember him and be rejoiced to again meet him and hear him preach. He was a great preacher and a faithful Pastor, beloved and respected by christians of all denominations and by all the people. After an absence of eighteen years, he comes again with his eloquent voice and his earnest christian heart, to preach Christ and Him crucified, to point the sinner to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world, and to greet and encourage the children of God, to stand fast in the faith which has made them free.

Let every member of the church and all the people come to hear Rev. A. J Myers, on Sabbath morning next.

IN MEMORIAM.—At a meeting of the Ferguson Township Sabbath School Association, held in the Methodist Church of Pine Grove Mills, Nov. 14, 1872, the following action was taken in reference to the death of Professor J. E. Thomas.

WHEREAS, it has pleased Divine Providence recently to call to his reward our beloved Brother, Professor S. E. Thomas, whose name we revere as the founder of this association, therefore.

Resolved, That we carry our griefs to Jesus, who only can comfort us in this, our sore bereavement.

Resolved, That in the peaceful and happy death of our departed Brother, we recognize the reward of the faithful Sabbath school worker, whose spirit fails to rest within the embrace of a present Savior.

Resolved, That we record our high appreciation of the self-denial, and unbounded zeal of our lamented Brother, in behalf of the Sabbath cause, and feel ourselves admonished to redouble our diligence.

Resolved, That we adopt his watchword and make the prominent end of Sabbath school work, the conversion of the scholar.

Resolved, That weeping at his silent tomb, and there shedding our tears of grief, we turn to Jesus to say, "Thy will be done."

Resolved, That we tender our hearty sympathies to his sorrowing family and relatives, commend them to the love, and compassion of a covenant keeping God

Resolved, That copies of the above be sent for publication to the Union Work, REPUBLICAN and Watchman, of Bellefonte, and that a copy also be sent to the family of the deceased. All of which is respectfully submitted.

THE HORSE SCARE.—The Turf, Field and Farm, one of the best publications of its class in the country, sensibly says: "When every other man you meet, owing to peculiar atmospheric changes, has a cold in his head, is it surprising that large numbers of our horses should show symptoms of catarrh? The atmospheric changes should affect horse flesh as readily as they affect human flesh. Horses cough, and men do likewise. Pray, then, do not let the sensational papers scare you out of your boots! The terrible horse disease is not half so terrible in reality as it is in print."

In this connection, we would state that one of our horsemen, who is well posted, states that there are no cases of hippozymosis in this city, and the horses reported as being affected are only suffering from the effects of severe cold.—Epitomist.

THANKSGIVING.—This is good Thanksgiving weather, and makes housekeepers think of mince and pumpkin pies, cranberry sauce and other such things to be made for family dinner on that day. Each succeeding annual round of Thanksgiving day is becoming more and more popular, and its observance more general, all over the land, as becomes a Christian nation. New England has in former years monopolized the pleasures incident to the day, but Pennsylvania is not a whit behind the land of the "Puritans" in its observance these late years. To-morrow will be observed all over the land as no former occasion of the kind has ever been.

TRUE.—The man who does not take his county paper, or who does take it and does not read the advertisements, can never be said to be well posted The advertisements indicate not only the business enterprise of the place in which the paper is published, but the enterprise of the advertiser. When you see a man who advertises liberally, you may be sure of finding bargains in his store, but he keeps up with his markets, and can always sell a little cheaper than those who do not advertise.

THE AMERICAN FARMERS' ADVOCATE leads the agricultural press for its enterprise and energy. The ADVOCATE Publishing Company, Jackson, Tenn., offer it free with any $2 00 or higher priced paper or magazine in the United States and at only fifty cents advance with others. This for a large sixteen page monthly filled to overflowing with the most valuable and entertaining matter for the farmer.

A WRITER in the Hearth and Home very properly criticises the habit, which prevails so universally in America, of shutting up the house so as to exclude the sunlight. This is appropriately called the national form of suicide. People can no more live without the sun than can plants shut up in the cellar, and every one knows how puny, colorless and sickly is the vegetation which never sees the light of the sun.

THE EPIZOOTIC.—What a Post Mortem Examination Shows.—Four horses that died of the prevailing disease were subjected to a post mortem examination in Baltimore recently, and from the report of the person who conducted the same we extract the following, which will be of interest to our horsemen especially and our readers generally:

"I found the entire passages from the nose to the lungs, inclusive, in a state of congestion approximating to gangrene. The pleura and peritonæum were inflamed, and in some portions sphacelous. The mucous membrane of the nose and windpipe were a dark color and covered with the same kind of purulent matter as that which is discharged from the nostrils. The lungs were highly inflamed and congested; when cut across discharged purulent matter.

In one horse they were gangrenous. The liver of each was so inflamed and congested as to render it friable; the spleen or melt and kidneys were also inflamed, congested and filled with purulent sanies; the stomach was so intensely inflamed that the mucous membrane had sloughed, leaving the muscular coat bare in some spots from four to six inches in diameter; the bowels were inflamed and congested; the thyroid, sub-maxillary and sub-lingual glands were inflamed, congested, and contained sanies; the parotid gland was intensely congested, blackened and very hard; the right ventricle of the heart in each horse was inflamed, while the left ventricle was sound.

"The brain was not affected, and the bladder healthful. From the number of organs involved, the violence and suddenness of the attack, together with the rapidity of its spread, attacking the whole city at once, as it were, and in a few days spreading over the State, we are compelled to denominate it a virulent zymotic blood disease."

WHAT IS WRONG.—Yesterday morning we met a friend whose genial demeanor indicated that he with many others, had taken passage on the little steamer "Brag," for the Head Quarters of Salt River. In his hand he held an immense "Pretzel," and his face gave unmistakable evidence of having laid in enough "Lager" to last the round trip. its hues being darkly, deeply, beautifully red? Our lachrymal glands were sensibly affected, and we wiped away a tear as we saw him running past, with elongated face, arched eyebrows, and ticket in his hatband, "and though when shall we look upon his like again?" Mentaly we bid him adieu.

Judge of our surprise however, when we met him again in the afternoon, in the bloom of perrenial youth and beauty, calmly walking up High St.; arrayed in a new and elegant suit, and having in his hand a dozen of Charles A. Glenn's premium Photographs, taken at the Mammoth Car.

COL. W. W. BROWN; Sir:—I regret exceedingly to call your attention to the carelessness of our Borough authorities, more especially in reference to that portion of our Borough ordinance pertaining to what is known as the Hog Law. If such a law is at this time in existance, why not enforce it? Our streets are literally covered with hogs, running at large, thereby causing annoyances of a very offensive nature. Have we a high constable, if so, is he neglecting the duties of his office, is he attending to other duties of more importance to him pecuniarily? If so, why not declare that important office vacant, and obtain the services of some one who will attend to it, and rid us of these abominable grunters, I have reference to the Hogs, and not the Council. Yours, &c.,

FURNITURE.—By reference to the advertising columns of the REPUBLICAN, it will be seen that Messrs Schroyer & Son, at their Furniture Store, in the Bush House Block, manufacture, and keep constantly on hand, a large stock of furniture of all kinds. Parlor setts, parlor chairs, rocking chairs, bedsteads, tables, bureaus, sofas, lounges, &c., &c., at prices to suit the times. They are first class mechanics, and reliable men. Call and see them.

TO HORSEMEN.—The Harrisburg Telegraph states that the following remedy is now used in that city on several horses affected with the prevailing disease, and from appearances has the desired effect, viz: 4 oz. spirits of hartshorn, 2 oz. tincture of arnica, 1½ pints of oil of hemlock, 1½ pints of alcohol. Bathe neck and under jaw. Also ten (10) drops of aconite on tongue three times a day.

MR. DITOR:

Democracy is dead. Its course is run. Greeley was too many for it. Its votaries died in the last ditch and their spirits have "gone where the woodbine twineth" and where Republicans cease from troubling. Their last struggle was a fearful one, but their once honored party had to die the death, and unlike Lazarus, there is no resurrection for it

Democrats and Whigs lie mouldering in the same grave "unwept, unhonored, and unsung." Democrats we have sympathy for you; we know you were basely sold out by your leaders. Your party had long since ceased to be a party of progress and now, like the Irishmans flea, it is no where to be found. You are left without a party and in solitude you must "gnaw a file."

We ask you to repent of your evil ways and "come with us and we will do you good for the Lord hath spoken good concerning Israel". You clung despairingly to old customs and old issues long after they were dead and like the deadly gangrene they poisoned your system, until not even such an emetic as Greeley, or such a purgative as B Gratz Brown could relieve your distempered and diseased organization. Democracy has been pushed into the stream of oblivion and the waves of popular opinion and forgetfulness are rolling over its dishonored carcass. It will endeavor to emerge a "What is it?" but that will be of no avail, for the cloven foot will betray his satanic majesty, no matter what disguise he assumes, and as soon as Democracy attempts to emerge from from the seething flood of ignooning and dishonor which surrounds it; it will again be shoved under by the great party of progress and reform.

You must get out of your old ruts, for as long as you keep plodding along in the old path you can never expect to rise. Discard the flesh pots of Egypt, and its stygian gloom and come forth into the light. We will accept you on probation and if you prove worthy of our trust we will honor you with our substance. There is a work to do and why not aid in doing it? This country must be made the first nation on the globe. The first in commerce, in manufactures, in agriculture, in education; in everything that can elevate and ennoble a people; and why not make it so at once? The Republican party has been laboring for this ever since its organization; and since its advent into power we, as a people, have made rapid strides towards this good. The Republican party struck the shackles from the hand of the slave, banished the task-master, enfranchised a race and made all men equal before the law irrespective of color. It established a currency and a banking system such as was before unheard of, created a precedence for international adjudication that challenges the admiration of the civilized world, and placed our country on a firmer and surer basis than ever before. Education received its full meed of attention even when our country was in the midst of a great civil war. Colleges and seminaries every where dot the land while the clang of the school bell is heard in every hamlet. And all this in the face of continued and uninterrupted hostility and opposition on the part of Democracy.

"Let Democrats remember that:—
"The issues of the life to be;
We weave in colors all our own;
And in the field of destiny,
We reap as we have sown."

Yours &c., KRINO

MR. EDITOR:—We deem it expedient to write a short article for the columns of your valuable paper, in justice to Miss Anna M. Baker, who, on the 16th of November, delivered a grand lecture to the people of this place. The theme of the discourse was, "The Past, Present and Future Girls." We had met Miss Baker before; but this was our first opportunity of enjoying her genial, companionable society, and of listenening to her earnest and able advocacy of one of the greatest questions now agitating the American people. During her brief experience in the field, she has established for herself an enviable reputation for integrity, ability, and energy in the discharge of her mission. Without desiring to make invidious comparisons, and wishing to award honor whose honor is due, we want to say that Miss Baker, deserves the highest praise for the magnificent manner in which she delivers her lectures. To say she lectured well, would not express the idea. She did splendidly, and the audience were delighted from the beginning to the end, when she closed, turned reluctantly away. And now young ladies and mothers, if you desire to undergo such an eye and ear-opening as will reveal to you a very different world from the one you live in, and become prouder ornaments of society, truer wives, lovelier mothers, come and hear Miss Baker, who can deliver, to you, a lecture with all the profound eloquence of a Demosthenes.

SALARIES OF TEACHERS.

There is nothing that tends to degrade the profession of teaching more, than the insufficient remunerations which are generally offered for the performance of the duties, connected with the same.

Every year, at the opening of the public schools, school-boards, almost invariably, find a great deficiency in teachers, especially experienced teachers.

On this account, many of the schools are not opened until late in the fall, and consequently must continue on, till quite late in the spring; which not only makes extra trouble for the directors, but occasions a loss of time on the part of farmer's sons, where services are needed at home, after the spring opens; while in the fall they are thrown idle, during the time that the school is without a teacher.

Communities comprising such schools not only sustain a loss in the way just described, but they suffer much greater losses arising from the unqualified teachers, which they receive; because such schools are usually sought for by persons having a very limited education, and who have never taught before.

This is imputable to the fact that the low insignificant wages, induce many of the experienced teachers, every year, to leave the profession.

As skilled labor always demands the highest recompense, good teachers are induced to repair to some other field to labor, where they are better compensated. And they cannot, properly, be censured for so doing; for the reason that a teacher is equally as justifiable in seeking the highest wages, as any other person.

But could not those who rank among the highest in their profession, be pursuaded to remain where they are, if the proper inducements were thrown out to them? Verily they can; and to this end let us exert our influence in the way of electing educated men to fill the office of director, who will, at once, elevate the salaries, and by so doing, will not only retain the first class teachers, but will cause incompetant ones to rise higher in the scale, or abandon the undertaking altogether

We can justly attribute the present lowness of the wages, existing in our county and adjoining ones, to the ignorant men who help to compose the school board.

Such men entertain the idea that mental labor does not deserve any higher reward than physical; and as they are generally very persistant in their cognitions, usually get their ends accomplished.

These are some of the principal causes that retard the progress of education, and the sooner they are obviated the better. J. C. W.

WHAT NEXT.—The report that silver had been discovered in Union township, between Hunlock's Creek and Shickshinny, and in quantity to pay for mining, was received with ridicule by many, as it has been gederally supposed that where coal abounds no other mineral is found. These doubting ones begin to rub their eyes now when the ore is produced in quantity sufficient to satisfy any one that it is really obtained on the spot indicated, and when they find that the officers of the United States Mint, at Philadelphia, have pronounced the mineral to be silver. To satisfy the skeptical a ton of the quartz was sent to the Mint and reduced, and we have seen the letter from Mr. Brooks the reducer and refiner, in which he says that a ton of quartz yielded fourteen hundred and forty one dollars and ninety eight cents worth of silver and gold, (the gold of course, forming a small proportion of the value.) Now that it is known that the gentlemen concerned in the exploration have discovered the precious metal beyond the shadow of a doubt, a company is to be formed and machinery for crushing and refining the ore will be placed in position at no distant day. The gentlemen concerned in the enterprise are men of standing in the community, whose character ensures the public that there is no deception or fraud about the matter. If silver is found so near our doors, may it not underlie our own soil? Rich as the Wyoming Valley is acknowledged to be in its mineral resources, the half has, in all probability, not yet been told.—Pittston Journal.

BURNING OUT CHIMNEYS.—Chimneys should be attended to every autumn, if we would avoid the fright of their taking fire. Many a valuable homestead has been destroyed from negligence in this matter. Soot accumulates very rapidly, and much sooner with some kinds of coal than others, and there is also a difference in the wood. If a chimney takes fire, the readiest means to stop it is to apply a wet table cloth, hearth rug or blanket to the whole front of the grate or fireplace, and either hold or pin it close into the jamb, then lift up the bottom far enough to throw a pail of water on the fire. If a pistol is fired up a chimney it will bring down quantities of soot, and it is an easy way to clean out a small chimney. A few handfuls of salt thrown into the fireplace or grate will put out the fire. Flour of sulphur thrown upon the fire will also paralyse the flames.

OBITUARY.

On the 19th inst., of Typhoid Fever, Mr. John Holter, of Boggs twp., aged 61 years, 3 months and 15 days.

Thus has passed away from our midst one of Centre counties, most respected and esteemed citizens. Mr. Holter, belonged to that energetic class, who knows no such word as fail. Beginning life a poor boy, he learned the Blacksmith trade, and by close attention to his business, and unceasing toil, he amassed a considerable amount of property, and erected one of the finest homesteads in the valley. Mr. Holter, always enjoyed excellent health, never knew what it was to be sick, never having to call a physician for himself, until in his last illness, he was constrained by his family, to call his physician. But, alas! nothing could be done to stay the ravages of the disease, and he passed away quietly and peaceably, as an infant falling asleep. His features wore an expression of tranquil resignation; and on the morning of his burial; as he lay in his coffin, beautiful in death, he appeared as if he would fain open his lips, so life like he looked. Yet, only the clay was resting there. His soul had gone to God, who gave it. There to enjoy his reward with his beloved Redeemer forever. E S D.

"GOOD FOR THIS DAY ONLY."—The question whether passengers may "lay over" and resume their journey at pleasure, or whether, when they do so, they have forfeited their tickets for the remainder of their journey, is still being discussed by the newspapers. The Courts have already decided that a man who buys a ticket, as it were, between Hanover and Baltimore, has the undoubted right to stop any place on the road and to resume his journey at his leisure, without buying another ticket. The legend, "Good for this date only," has no value and the law has decided that any action taken by conductors, with a view to enforcing the implied contract, is illegal.—Hanover Spectator.

ONE OF THE LEADING PHYSICIANS of Philadelphia city.—A careful examination of mortuary statistics establish the fact that one adult person out of every six dies of consumption, and so alarmingly is this disease gaining that no remedy ever all other ill to which flesh is heir, that its approach to one's immediate circle is regarded with perfect horror. If you will carefully examine the records of Medicine you will invariably discover that the great want of success in treating this disease has been a deficiency of pathological knowledge of the function affected, but not a suitable compound that would act upon the disease and all the sympathetic affections.

This want has at last been met in the Ritter Wine of Iron, prepared by the celebrated Dr. E. E. Ruttl, No 239 North Ninth street, Philadelphia. This excellent compound can be taken by persons with the most delicate stomach without any debilitating effect always giving strength and largely increasing the nervous energy of the patient. In all cases of pulmonary complaints it is admirably adapted to relieve the severity of the symptoms in the advanced stages of the disease, or to arrest it in its incipiency. If you want something that will give you strength a good appetite, build up your constitution, and in place of morose sensations a cheerfulness, give you a brisk and vigorous step in life, try Kunkel's Bitter Wine of Iron. It has already received the meed of praise from thousands who have tested its virtues, and for many years maintained its reputation with untold consistency.
